

DANIEL 6:1-23

God protects Daniel when he is thrown into a lions' den for praying to God instead of the king.

SAY THIS:

Who can help you be brave?
GOD CAN HELP YOU BE BRAVE.

 DO THIS:

MORNING TIME

When you go into your child's room this month, say, "Where's my super kid? There he/she is! I see my big, brave boy/girl!"

DRIVE TIME

Add some super kid fun to your drive this month by practicing your super kid poses. Each time you get out of the car, tell your child to strike his/her best super kid pose as you strike your own pose. Then, say together, "God can help me be brave!" Now you're both ready for whatever comes your way!

CUDDLE TIME

Cuddle with your child this month and pray, "Dear God, it makes me feel so brave and strong knowing You are always with us. We don't ever have to be afraid of anything, because no one is more powerful than You, God! We love You so much! In Jesus' name, amen."

BATH TIME

Add a few superhero toys to bath time. (Just about every Disney main character qualifies as a superhero!) While you give your child a bath, ask your child to name each of the toys and talk about what they did that was brave, strong, or courageous. Talk about how we can be brave super kids too, because God is always with us.

BASIC TRUTH:

GOD LOVES ME.

PARENTING TAKES COURAGE

By Kendra Fleming

Confession: I lay awake at night and worry about my kids. It's true. I know that worry is a waste of time. I know that worry shows a lack of faith. But sometimes . . . I worry about my kids.

What if they fall and break their arm? What if they don't pass that test? What if they are hurt? Mistreated? Taken advantage of?

There's a part of me that would like to create this safe, protected, and controlled environment for my kids . . . to put locks on all of the doors and keep the bad out. I know this wouldn't be best for them, but it sure is a tempting thought.

Worry won't get you very far.

It takes courage to be a good parent.

Next time you need a little courage, try this:

Seek a new perspective.

There are worries in every stage of life. The first time you leave your baby with a sitter is scary. But there are parents who are further down the road than you are. They've been there. They've seen how things turn out. They can give you a new point of view. Ask them.

Allow children to learn from their mistakes.

Would I let my child touch a hot stove? No way! Did my kids scrape their knees when learning to ride their bike? Absolutely. The great things in life come with some risk. There are lessons that your child needs to learn by overcoming obstacles. And when we don't allow them to face the tough stuff, we cripple them.

Acknowledge that you are not in control.

This is a tough one for me. Sometimes I would like to be in control. After all, my way is obviously the best way! But I can't keep all drunk drivers off the road. I can't stop sickness. I can't build a fence high enough to protect them. I am not able to control every circumstance.

It takes courage to be a good parent. Sometimes I need the advice of those who've been there. Sometimes I need to help my child learn all that they can from the worrisome circumstances. And sometimes, I just need to remember to give my fears to One who holds the whole world in His hands.
